HoloGLOBE App

The HoloGLOBE mobile app was created and provided by the Institute for Earth Observations at Palmyra Cove (IEOPC).

1. What Data Do We Collect? The App does not store, collect, send, or manage any personal data of any kind. The App can access the camera on your mobile device to perform an image capture function needed to perform tasks within the App. The App do not store or transmit any information captured by the camera.

If you provide personal information to communicate with IEOPC, IEOPC will process such information for the specific and limited purposes for which is provided. For example, we may collect and use personal data to respond to a question or to communicate with you for other purposes.

2. Use of Data Collected by the App. The App does not store, collect, send, or manage any personal data of any kind.

3. Sharing of Information. Certain partners and outside contractors hired by IEOPC have access to user information in order to assist IEOPC in carrying out security, financial and operational activities. From time to time, IEOPC may also share user information with its sponsors, auditors and consultants. Additionally, IEOPC reserves the right to share user information with any entity that is an affiliate or successor in interest to IEOPC. Except as described in Section 3 hereof, IEOPC will not distribute your information to third parties.

4. Legal Requirements. IEOPC may access and disclose any and all available user information to the extent necessary to meet national security, public interest, or legal process requirements, such as a court order or subpoena.

5. Interaction with Children. The App offers some limited educational content that may be of interest to students under 13. No personally identifiable information is collected from these visitors unless voluntarily submitted as a request for information or educational services. The information supplied is used to respond to the user's inquiries or to provide educational services requested by the user. Students are advised to consult with their parents before giving any personal information online.
